GREATEST WARSHIP LAUNCHED

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., March 15.—

Fifteen thousand tons of steel, the 70 per cent. complete super-dreadnought, Pennsylvania, the largest ship in the American navy, slid off the ways of the Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock Company into her native element at 10:11:30 o'clock this morning, with thousands of spectators cheered.

As she slid into the water her stern was draped with the champagne from the bottle cast against her by her sponsor, Miss Elizabeth Kolb of Germantown, Pa.

WEST END DAYLIGHT ROBBERY

There was another daring hold-up in the West End today. Miss Beala Horvitz, aged twenty-three, was held up in the store of her mother, Mrs. Esther Horvitz, No. 41 Salem street, shortly after 7 a. m. by a young man, about twenty-seven years of age, slender and very shabbily dressed, came in. He said, "I want money." "I didn't understand him and asked him what he wanted. He said, 'I want money and I want it quick.'"

TODAY'S MARKET SUMMARY

There was not much activity in the stock markets at the start today. The usual market leaders were not in much demand, either in New York or in Boston, and there was a small supply of stocks. It is common belief that before long the immense surplus of money which is accumulating will seek investment in securities. Americans were lower in London.

STATE IS READY TO SEIZE THAW

Pleading the decision Thaw spent the night in the Tombs, still in the custody of the sheriff of New York county.

In the arguments in support of their motion, Thaw's attorneys set forth briefs outlining their contention that Thaw should be returned to New Hampshire by the county of New York if the county is to keep faith with the United States federal authorities, now that Thaw has been found not guilty of the offense, to stand trial for which he was extradited.

Mr. Kennedy, for the state, argued that the fact remains that Thaw was first taken to Mattawoman was still valid, and that Thaw, now being within the jurisdiction of the county, regardless of how he got here, should be returned to the hospital for the insane. Mr. Kennedy also argued that Thaw be returned to the hospital pending the eventual decision, or until he was removed and released by the process of law.

Thaw is cheerful and confident that his trouble is nearly over. He has recovered almost entirely from the rheumatism from which he suffered during his trial last week. He is still wearing his gray hair, and is in court. His mother, sister, Mrs. Josephine Thaw, and his brother, Joseph Thaw, have been his constant companions during the court proceedings.

Thaw's attorney, General Cook, who has been assisting in the prosecution of Thaw, is now learned today that Thaw has been released from the Tombs, and that Thaw is now being held in the hospital for the insane.

LAUNCH BIGGEST U. S. WARSHIP

States has now the strongest warship afloat.

"Our new Pennsylvania, with its displacement of 31,000 tons and a speed of 21 knots, carrying twelve 14-inch guns," he said, "is a more powerful battleship than the Queen Elizabeth, of which much has recently been published."

"The Queen Elizabeth, England's most powerful battleship, is of 27,000 tons displacement. She carries eight 13.5-inch guns in four turrets of two on each side."

HEAVY BROADSIDE.

"Although the guns of the Queen Elizabeth are not quite larger than the guns of the Pennsylvania, the weight of shells fired in one broadside of twelve guns from the Pennsylvania is about 21 per cent greater than the weight of shells fired in one broadside of the eight guns from the Queen Elizabeth, and the speed of the Queen Elizabeth is only 19 knots, as compared with the 21 knots of the Pennsylvania."

"The Japanese battleship, Yamato, is of 31,000 tons displacement, and carries twelve 16-inch guns in four turrets of three on each side. She is the most powerful battleship in the world."

"The launching of the Pennsylvania is an event of great importance to the United States. It shows the strength of our navy and the steady development of our armaments."

SOUTH BOSTON IS READY FOR 17TH

Everything is ready for the Ex-conviction Day celebration in South Boston tomorrow, but the open carriage for the parade. City Clerk John E. Dever says the city will pay for four hundred only this year.

The city has always provided carriages for the committee of fifty. Boston citizens who have had charge of the arrangements. They are all members of the South Boston Citizens' Association.

Four carriages will carry sixteen comfortably, and twenty if they squeeze in. But the Committee of Fifty want to know what the other thirty members are going to do. There has been a scramble for seats in the four motor carriages. At the present writing it looks as if thirty committee men will have to make arrangements at their own expense, remain out of the parade.

The majority of carriages is a 15. In the absence of this year's celebration. It has caused much trouble and more feeling. An eleven-hour appeal is likely to be made to Mayor Curley today.

Tonight the banquet will be held at the Marlborough building. President Michael J. Maloney of the South Boston Citizens' Association will make the address of welcome and introduce Dr. Herbert J. Keenan as the chief speaker. Other speakers are to be President Curley, Congressman Deane, Senator Cullen, and Representative Murray. Judge Logan and Representative William N. Cronin.

The parade will leave Farragut road, Marine Park, at 7:15, and pass through Broadway, 17th street, around Thomas Park, to Telegraph street, to Dorchester street and left some question, which I had feared for her.

Very Effective Method for Banishing Hairs

(Make It Today)

At very little cost any woman can rid her face of hairy growth, if she will use the delicate treatment. This is made by mixing some water with a little powdered talcum. This paste is spread upon the hairy surface for 2 or 3 minutes, then rubbed off and the skin washed, when every trace of hair will have vanished. No harm results from this treatment, but care should be used to buy real talcum.

"I also told him that he had grown children, that he would probably not consent to our marriage."

Mrs. Angle told of several illnesses she had suffered after she became acquainted with Mr. Ballou, and of an operation for appendicitis she had undergone a few months before his death.

Mrs. Angle then told of Sunday evening meetings with Mr. Ballou following her return from New York where she was confined as a patient at the Labor Temple Church, East 14th street.

"Did he meet you on Sunday, June 21st?" asked Mr. Klein.

"Yes, he met me that evening as he had many other nights," Mrs. Angle replied.

"What did you do on that night?"

"I was dressed in white," Mrs. Angle told of her visit to the Bridgeport railroad station a few days before Mr. Ballou had died on his last journey to the city of the dead.

Mrs. Barrett and her aged mother had moved into the block that afternoon June 21st and I spent a large part of the afternoon with them helping them to get settled," the witness testified.

"The evening after Mr. Ballou and the man had not come to turn on the gas in their apartment. I invited them upstairs to my rooms for tea. They stayed there with me until nearly 11 o'clock when they went down stairs again."

"Mr. Klein showed Mrs. Angle several pieces of wearing apparel found in her apartment, which she identified as hers."

"What did you do then?" Mr. Klein asked.

"I called Jimmie," Mrs. Angle replied.

"Who is this Jimmie?" asked Klein.

"Mr. Ballou," she said, weeping.

Mrs. Angle then related her telephone conversation with Mr. Ballou. She asked him to come over for a little while," she said, "but he said he would do so. He was real jovial about the relations and told me that I did not stop my practicing, which I had been doing since he was away."

"He asked if I wanted him to bring me anything from the stores."

"I told him to get me a pair of shoes and a hat, and I left some question, which I had feared for her."

EX-MAYOR GREEN IS 85 AND HAPPY

Numerous congratulations by mail and telephone and in person are coming today to Dr. Samuel Abbott Green, ex-Mayor of Boston, author, historian and Grand Republican, who in Oliver Wendell Holmes' happy language, is "eighty-five years young" today.

Speaking in his apartment at Hotel Canterbury in a reporter for the AMERICAN, the venerable ex-Mayor said:

"Yes, I'm eighty-five today and I am as happy as a lark. Everybody is so kind. Even the little children whom I have loved all my life, remember me with their simple little gifts which speak so tenderly of their affection."

"Many Cases of RHEUMATISM NOW

Says We Must Keep Feet Dry, Avoid Exposure and Eat Less Meat.

Stay off the damp ground, avoid exposure, keep feet dry, eat less meat, drink lots of water, and above all take a spoonful of salts occasionally to keep down uric acid.

Rheumatism is caused by poisonous toxin, called uric acid, which is generated in the bowels and absorbed into the blood. It is the function of the kidneys to filter it out of the urine. The pores of the skin are also a means of freedom and chilly, cold weather, when the pores are closed, thus forcing the kidneys to do double duty; they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate this uric acid, which keeps accumulating in the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles, causing stiffness, soreness and pain called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Dr. Seltz; put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for two weeks. This is said to eliminate uric acid by stimulating the kidneys to normal action, thus ridding the blood of these impurities.

Dr. Seltz is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia salts. It is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism. Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia water drink which overcomes uric acid and is beneficial to your kidneys as well—Advertisement.

BROWLEY 'DON'TS' TO LESSEN CRIME

Superintendent Michael H. Crowley of the Boston police, who today issued several "don'ts" which, if observed, will lessen the opportunity of the past six months have been made during hold-ups and safe robberies in Boston, but Boston has been one of the most fortunate Eastern cities. To drive the hold-up men from the city, twenty new men were added to the force that night and additional plain clothes men have been put on the streets at night in the central district and extra men detailed to the Western police stations.

"Police officers have been instructed to arrest all suspicious persons," said Superintendent Crowley. "Not Sunday night nineteen men, were even if it was only a small boy, charged against them. We will continue to do this until we catch them all or drive them from the city."

"People should be alarmed at conditions. They are not so bad as they are in Greater Boston are containing with."

If every store would have a night guard it would aid the police because they could see if anything was being done in the store. If the light is not burning it is a sign that all is not right in the store."

NOTES FOR PLAN.

A common practice of housebreakers is leaving their home before leaving a note on the door telling the time of their return or to the maid or school child to whom the key can be found.

"Many breaks result from these notes, often when a poor advertisement might only be looking for food but cannot raise the limitation to take articles that can be sold for food."

A mistake many women make is to put articles of value in dresser drawers or closets and lock them. If they would leave the drawers and doors unlocked and hide their valuables in a place not often searched, they would save damage to their furniture and, in many cases, save their property.

Drop earrings can easily be swapped by a clever crook, and people should not give invitations for the taking of their property and then complain when it is gone.

Large hand bags are carried by women too carelessly. They should be carried high under the arm and the money should be in a small purse in pocket.

ALWAYS BE ON GUARD.

"If you are attacked, scream loud and help arrive. When walking home late at night walk on well-lighted streets. Do not walk on dark thoroughfares for the purpose of getting home a few minutes earlier. If people would walk in the center of the street they would have a better chance of seeing any person that might be ready to attack them. Persons in the middle of the street are in the middle of the street."

Persons in charge of lodging houses should be careful to whom they let rooms and should demand references and pay in advance.

If you have any person rooming in your house who does not work and of whom you are suspicious, send the man before your house in "cleared out" by the police.

"Do not be too suspicious, but always follow these instructions they will greatly aid in catching the crooks or driving them to parts of the country where they will not trouble us."

RUSSELL TELLS OF OPERA SCHOOL

NEW YORK, March 16.—Henry Russell, manager of the Boston Opera Company, who arrived on board the Adriatic, told of the foundation of the International Academy of Opera in Paris, which, he said, will aid the superintending of American singers who go there to study music.

With Louis J. Brown as artistic director, the new academy was founded with the immediate aim of providing work and remuneration for those French, Polish and Belgian singers affected by the war.

It will encourage singers by offering scholarships, entitling a student, if it is possible, to maintenance during the term of tuition, which will be free, and also will arrange for the public debut of the singer. Transferring from New York to Paris, if the singer is an American, will be forthwith.

The money expended on the singer is to be refunded gradually from their earnings after graduation.

It had gutted every corner in the cell block and badly damaged the prison property. One hundred and twenty captives were in the building when it was fired. It was quickly extinguished by firemen and taken to their cells without difficulty.

HALT ELOPEMENT OF LYNN GIRL

Elizabeth E. Lynn, daughter of N. H. High Rock, who is held by the Rochester, N. Y., police at the request of her mother, Mrs. Oliver L. Lynn, a week ago the girl went to Rochester to visit her brother. Saturday Mrs. Lynn received a letter from her daughter saying she intended to leave for Indianapolis to marry Wesley Palmer. Her mother found a marriage license and then learned in Lynn, March 1, and telegraphed the Rochester police to hold the girl.

Mr. Penn, the girl's father, said: "Four months ago, they became formally engaged and he gave her a diamond ring. He asked her consent to the marriage. We refused because the girl is so young. Two months ago she again sought our consent and we refused. Four weeks ago she came here from Indianapolis and we gave our consent under the condition that they were to wait two years."

"March 1, I went and got the license for them after they had agreed not to marry until they had waited a year. I went and my daughter went to visit her brother in Rochester. She then later received a letter telling me she had Indianapolis clothing and was going to leave for Indianapolis to marry Wesley Palmer."

"In planning to leave Rochester the following day, but I had the police told her. Now she writes that she will be home on Tuesday. If they want to be married, we are willing, but Wesley should come on here and be married at her home."

STOPS FALLING HAIR

This Home Made Mixture Stops Hair from Falling Out and Aids its Growth.

To a half-pint of water add: Bay Rum, 1 ounce; a small box of Glycerine. Mix well.

There are all simple ingredients that you can buy from any drugstore at a very little cost, and mix them yourself. Apply to the scalp once a day for two weeks, then once every other week until all the mixture is used. A half-pint should be enough to rub the head of shampoo and tell the shampooer to stop the hair from falling out, relieves itching and scalp disease.

Although it is not a cure, it acts upon the hair roots and will darken, streaked, faded, gray hair, in ten or fifteen days. It promotes the growth of the hair and makes hair soft and glossy.

Her Married Life

Warren Suddenly Asks Helen to Take a Trip to Panama with Him

Copyright, 1935, by International News Service
Helen Helen lived through that evening, she hardly ever forgot it. All through dinner she was impelled to tell Warren what she had written the letter, but something seemed to restrain her impulse, and she kept quiet and tried to act as naturally as possible. Warren was unusually quiet, too, and said very little even when the dessert was brought in and Helen looked up and asked if it were as good as usual.

"I guess so," he had said, in a preoccupied manner that made Helen nervously writhen all over, and then he had gone on eating deliberately as though he had all the time in the world.

"Why the waiter?" he asked, looking up as the waiter removed Helen's dessert plate.

"I don't know, dear," said Helen quickly. "I feel nervous this evening, that's all." Her accustomed word of embarrassment fell from her lips naturally, and she showed no sign of having thought that Warren was contemplating anything underhanded. She had never been the least suspicious of her faith and love. How unworshipfully she had been the best of wives, she thought, for she had never been so happy as when she was with him. Warren, like her, had been here, it was something about her face, her eyes, her smile, that made him so sure of her faith and love.

Warren had supposed Helen to be a devotee, but she had refused on the plea of her health, and she had been so good, she had not followed Warren directly into the living room, to move her hat and coat. That would give Warren time to do anything he wanted, she thought to herself. When she had joined him some ten minutes afterward, he was sitting in his accustomed chair, smoking a pipe, and looking at her with a look that she had never seen before.

The next morning Helen dragged herself around breakfast and tired from the effects of a sleepless night. She went into the bathroom for a dash of powder, and then she came out, and she found Warren waiting for her. He was the act of preparing when the telephone rang so suddenly that she dropped the powder, and it fell out of her hand and scattered over the floor. Warren called her just then, and she hurried to the telephone to be greeted by Warren's breathless hello.

WARREN'S BRIGHTENING HELEN WITH A TELEPHONE MESSAGE.

"Hello," she said, "is anything the matter?"

"I'm coming up to the house in about half an hour. Do you think you could get ready for a trip on short notice if I decided to take you with me?"

Helen almost dropped the receiver.

"A trip, you say, Warren, what kind of trip?"

"I'll tell you all about it as soon as I get up to the house. If you think you can get ready to leave at tomorrow afternoon, I'll take you."

"And Warren?"

"Yes, of course, I suppose so, unless you could leave her with Helen and Louise."

"What do you think?"

"I don't know. Start to get your things together, and we'll talk it over as soon as I can get up. Tell Nora."

"I'll do that."

This Monarchy Endures

Another incident in this fascinating series will appear here soon.

Up-to-Date Jokes

A South Lambeth, England, teacher asked her class to write an essay on London.

Later she was surprised to find the following in one attempt:

"The young author of London are noted for their stupidity."

"The young author was asked how he got that idea."

"Please," said the boy, "the reply, 'I says in a king's mouth untouched by care and pain! Here a clear vision of London is very dense!'"

"What a wonderful color you've got!"

"I've been rushing around so getting dressed that naturally my face got pink."

"Naturally, dear."

"That," said the boy, "is the nearest."

"I see. A kind of blackberry patch."

"Mamma, can't we have anything 'Yes, my dear, but be careful and don't want anything you can't have."

A Trifle Mixed

One Peter was feeling like one big, contented snail as he stood in the glorious sunshine, arrayed in a long coat of dazzling white, unperturbed by the first match of the season.

Looking up he noticed that the hands of the big clock on the pavilion and except to ten minutes past twelve and he realized that he was getting late.

His right hand felt for the pocket of his coat and he found it empty.

"Naturally, dear," said the boy, "the nearest."

THIS Monarchy never totters. High above all the courts of the world, democratic and aristocratic, sits on a cushion of his mother's patient making His Serene Highness, Emperor of the Home and Reliance of the Warm, White Bottle, just anybody's baby. Here for once in a while, a sort of head with feathers like a bird wearing a crown! Here for once in a while, a pair of eyes like lakes of joy! Here is a king's mouth untouched by care and pain! Here a clear vision of London is very dense!

The Monarchy that Endures—that will never crumble and sink in upon itself like a rickety house—that is not gilt on the outer door with an interior of dust and death. Here is a ruler who sways truly by divine right, and his palace is the world—his ceiling touches the blue of the sky—the altar of it vaults rounder in the light of the sun and the moon and its foundations are rooted in the Valley of Despair Shadow, where the mothers who bear him walk for a little while. H— the King!—NELL BRINKLEY.

WONDER WHY—

People always judge the size of a man's bank account in inverse ratio to the automobile he rides in—some men with big cars can afford them?

Mothers think their own daughters were born to be married off to some other mother's sons—and all other daughters were born to be objected to as wives for their sons?

Somebody ever tells money to "shut up" when it talks?

You are never granted a restful vacation in the school of experience?

The people who expect too much and the people who expect too little are always disappointed when exactly what they expected happens?

Women insist on carrying vanity bags and party cases and discouraging to men how on shamefully some women make up?

Making a Star Role for Yourself

"Act Well Your Part" and Do Not Be Conquered by Discontent

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"We do not oppose the part we play in life—let us rather play that part well or ill, we do not choose."

The part was chosen for us by the AUTHOR OF THE PLAY.—Epictetus.

DISCONTENT meets a gray shadow on all the brightness of life. It occupies the soul with regret and causes the mind to feel maltreated and abused. It fills the heart with sorrow. It occupies on great a place in the mental and spiritual life of the one who feels it, that there is no room for more active physical force to drive it out. Discontent is not one of the virtues that takes possession of one forcibly and for evil. It is a result of deliberately fostered mood. What is more, it is akin to one of the finest of the virtues—if only that virtue is not misinterpreted. Discontent can be turned into ambition, almost for the time.

The vice that embitters life and leaves the token visible for all to see—the vice that weighs down the mouth corners and dulls the eyes of the physical being as well as of the mind and soul, and heart, can be transmutated into pure gold for the more trying.

How much did it ever profit any one to sit in a room and cry and cry and cry? "Miserable man, miserable man, miserable man!"

And yet he stands only a few steps from the goal of his life, trying to make the best of the circumstances, and so cleverly and so wisely to his own way to a better end.

It is almost hackneyed to speak of poverty-ridden, in order to be ready for any chance that might come. And yet he stands only a few steps from the goal of his life, trying to make the best of the circumstances, and so cleverly and so wisely to his own way to a better end.

Magee Hurts Shoulder Again Brave Fears Bone is Broken

By JACK CONWAY.

MALDEN, Ga., March 16.—Sherwood Magee, fence buster extraordinaire, is today doing considerable worrying about his right shoulder, which he injured while pasturing in centre field ten days ago. It was not believed at first that the injury was of a serious nature and the former Quaker star was expected to be as good as over in a few days.

INJURED SHOULDER AGAIN IN TOSSE

The result was that St. 24, was met with the sprain on in a few days. He could not throw a ball more than ten feet but he was still able to swing his heavy bat. Magee was happy. The injured shoulder, however, did not act better as fast as was expected. It continued to hurt Magee badly, but he still managed to find his way out to centre field and hit in his regular place in the dear old Thursday.

Magee's Loss Would Prove Big Handicap

The Braves could not very well afford to have Magee out of the lineup once the pennant campaign gets under way. It is true both Cather and Gilbert are fast, steady outfielders, but they are also to smash out safe hits with great regularity, but the injury to Magee is in the same class with the fence buster. Magee is usually there with a sweet low line pitch and has the happy faculty of bouncing the ball off of the ball park in close games.

50 AND 52 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, MARCH 16, 1915.

A Lesson from Switzerland

Two-thirds of the Railways in That Republic Are Owned by the State and They Are Given the Very Highest Credit and Rating by our Leading Bankers.

There appeared in the press of Saturday morning an advertisement concerning the sale of bonds by the government of Switzerland. It contains a general statement of the financial condition of the Swiss Republic by the banking firms of Lee, Higginson & Company, Halsey & Company and by the Guaranty Trust Company of New York. That statement is most interesting. This is part of it:

"The government owns about 2,000 miles of railroad, approximately two-thirds of the total mileage in Switzerland, on which there is a total debt incurred or assumed by the government of about $900,000,000. This railway debt is not a burden to the government as it represents the acquisition of valuable properties which in 1913 earned net $13,570,900, a sum considerably in excess of the annual requirements for interest and sinking funds. The railroads are kept in first-class physical condition and the methods of accounting are believed to be highly conservative. In our opinion the credit of Switzerland is entitled to the very highest rating."

A very few years ago the Government of Switzerland was one of the MOST CORRUPT in EUROPE. The national government and cantons were boss-ridden, the government was inefficient and the people were all discouraged. Democracy seemed a failure in its little oasis among the Alps.

The people of Switzerland decided, however, to make one great effort to reform their government. They made up their minds that they could never have a government of, for and by the people without some means of legally reviewing and controlling the action of their Legislature through a direct vote of the people. So, they devised what is now known throughout the world as the initiative and referendum. By this device, whenever their legislatures, national, state or cantonal, corruptly passed a law which the people disapproved, the people were enabled, by the referendum, to veto that law. Also when the boss-ridden national legislature refused to pass a law which the people wanted, by the initiative they themselves were enabled to pass it over the heads of the legislature. By the initiative and referendum, they took the necessary first step towards reform. They were thus enabled to obtain the laws they wanted and to prevent the passage of bad laws which they did not want.

With power in their hands, the next step was to ascertain where the cause of the corruption of their representatives lay. Men are naturally honest and are naturally patriotic and in the large numbers which constitute a legislative body, there is wisdom. The people of Switzerland knew, as every intelligent man knows, that when a legislature is corrupt and passes bad laws and refuses to pass laws in the interest of the State, it is not through any lack of honesty or of intelligence or of naturally sound impulses, but because some more powerful influence than their own innate character is operating upon them.

The Swiss people discovered on investigation that what was making Switzerland corrupt were the railroads, the liquor monopoly and the political bosses which that combination of influences created and maintained. They decided wisely that there was no compromise in a situation like this; and that the government must either be all railroad or all Swiss. They preferred a government that was all for Switzerland and they took the railroads into their own hands and have been operating them ever since.

Today, as a result of the initiative and referendum and the public ownership and operation of their railroads, it is universally acknowledged that Switzerland is the purest democracy and the purest government in the world.

The bankers who made this confession concerning Switzerland would tell you that public ownership will ruin our country. What they really mean is that public ownership would deprive certain kinds of business generally of a great many opportunities for cutting melons, that there would be fewer swollen fortunes and fewer political bosses. The people of this country should firmly fix it in their minds that the political boss is moved by strings which lead into the back offices of the great corporations and that, like the jackal and hyena, he lives upon the remains of the killings of the great beasts of prey. Switzerland got rid of him when it got rid of the great beasts of prey, which were in Switzerland and are in this country the privately managed railroads.

WANDERLUST

By CONSTANCE CLARKE

A LONG stretch of road 'neath a sky half asleep,
And the heart of a gypsy astraying in me,
The call of the wild in the call of the deep,
The longing to know and to feel and to see,
To read in the stars with a catch of the breath,
The laws of the infinite, measureless, vast;
To feel through life but the mystery of death,
To know in the present the thought of the past.

A road stretching into the great faraway,
Pale stars still adream on an anxious sky,
The call of a bird wheeling out on the grey,
A chill in the breath of the wind rushing by,
A stir like the rush of a far distant sea,
The birth of a day with the night scarcely gone,
The heart of a gypsy astraying in me,
The call to be up and away with the dawn.

In Reel Life In Real Life

More Truth Than Poetry

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

The Old Style

I AM bugs about the magazine detective Who is master of the analytic dog And can trace an evil act or run to earth a malefactor With a test tube and a pocket microscope. All the methods of the late lamented Hawkshaw Are condemned in up-to-date detective books. For the modern sleuth despises worn-out methods like disguises— Yet the guy that wears false whiskers gets the crooks.

IN the books and magazines the great detective, With an insensible expression on his face, Uses every known appliance for the thief-pursuing science. When he grandly taxis forth upon the chase, He would scorn to wear a wig upon his coco. He would chuckle at the primitive belief Of the man who recognizes there is virtue in disguise— Still, the man who wears false whiskers lands the thief.

THOUGH psychology in fiction is sufficient To enable any man to handle crime, And the man who uses reason in the end is sure to seize on The right party and to set him doing time. But when one gets down to simple practicals, He observes that fiction methods sometimes fail, And the guy who realizes that there's something in disguise Is the guy that puts the rascals into jail.

There Is Something Screwed When the Censors Get Through With It

Either there is a moving picture camera behind the bill when those Plutocrats are on the war path or some of them have signed with the big leagues and are looking for a little jostling advertising. Fighting by Indians isn't done any more.

What Else Could Be Expected? Since the introduction of luxury in Sing Sing one of Mr. Osborne's graduates burglarized a house in order to get a bath. Cannot New York State provide means to support ex-convicts in the style to which they are accustomed?

Some Consolation No man can possibly be as bad as he looks in a mugshot photograph.

Effort the Supreme Joy

By G. VERE TYLER

THE law of effort is as unfailing as that which governs the tide. It is as sure as that which governs the flower.

Once we plant the seed of purpose and persist in the effort to make it grow it will grow.

There is not a tree that ever reached maturity that did not persist in its effort in spite of storms— there is not a little wild violet that has not met a wind almost too chill, and some even have had to push their way through biting snow. Few men make the effort of a little flower. How many are chilled to the core and blighted! Every storm overcomes a man transported to power. Men rejoice in seeing the little rascal of others ride the storm, and stand in dismay on the shores of their own life if waves come toward them.

The supreme joy in life is effort. The only thing that never fails one is effort-perseverance. There are times when effort seems the one futile thing. This is never true. Effort often hides its intention. A man may be working to be a great architect and end in being a great painter. Effort is a possession of the subconscious self and keeps its secrets well. Effort is the magician that brings a man into his own.

A child that does not make an effort at its own birth is stillborn. A life that does not make an effort at development is a still life.

A thief behind prison bars who has made an effort at thriving is not as despairing an object as the old bum who walks the streets looking like a bundle of rags who has never made an effort at anything beyond breathing. In the eyes of the law the thief of misdirected effort is the first of misdirected effort that may have for a moment revealed possibilities for higher progress. In the eyes of the other nobles, I would rather see my son a burglar than a tramp. At any rate, the burglar is not dead, and there is hope.

One has only to walk through a forest to observe the effort. Some trees had to make to grow. One is easy to see, was struck in his earliest youth by a storm that nearly by itself it doubled. What a twisted, knotty thing it is, still bent, still handicapped, but a full-grown tree, and in some eyes more beautiful than its next door neighbor, who they crippled him, and who has yet escaped the blighting storms and stands erect. A man who has withstood the first storm, who has yet escaped the blighting storms and stands erect. A man who has withstood the first storm, who has yet escaped the blighting storms and stands erect.

No effort ever perished in the length of time proportionate to the aim ever wholly failed. There are unseen powers shaping the end as never-failing as those that keep the nails growing. One does not see the nails grow, and yet they are always growing. One does not see the effort developing, but it is always developing. Effort draws to itself fighting soldiers as a great general does. Great efforts at great accomplishments, and let one day find the whole world at the back of the one making the effort, aiding him. And this is not an accident. It is always so.

Boys as Well as Girls,

Dorothy Dix Shows,
Must Be Taught Manners

BY DOROTHY DIX
WHY is it that mothers take so much trouble to teach their girls good manners and none to teach their boys any manners at all? Why is a little girl adored from her birth to act like a lady, while a boy is permitted to conduct himself like a hoodlum? Why are there "falsely schools" for girls, where they are taught little stories of conduct that set apart the well-bred from the ill-bred, while a boy is left to form his own manners, and become a Beau Brummel, or a boor, as it happens?

Do we consider that good manners and social adroitness are less necessary to a man than they are to a woman? Do we hold that women should have a monopoly on good manners? Or do we think that good manners come by nature, as dogberry thought, a knowledge of reading and writing did? Whatever the answer is to these queries, there is no disputing the fact that the average little girl, of good family, has charming manners, and the average little boy is a savage. When the little girl comes into the room when you are sitting on her mother's lap, she drops you a courtesy and treats you with respectful consideration.

Boys Rude Everywhere But let little brother come into the room, and he doesn't notice a visitor any more than if she was a piece of furniture. He keeps his hat on his head, and cuts across the conversation to ask his mother whatever he wants to know, and when you speak to him, he doesn't even answer you.

One of the sights of this city that is enough to make any one weep is the horde of boys that you encounter on the street cars. They are well-dressed, evidently come from respectable families, but they have the manners of hoodlums. They rush pell-mell into a car, seize every good seat, and sit there while gray-haired women and women with babies stand.

It makes one wonder what sort of mothers these boys have that they have not been taught the first element of good manners, or that the first principles of the art of being a gentleman. Last Summer I stayed all night at a New England Summer resort. At dinner, at the table next to mine were eight or ten young girls and boys, having a jolly time together. Presently to this table came an elderly woman. All of the other boys went on with their eating and drinking, but one lad sprang to his feet and stood while a waiter drew out the old lady's chair and settled her comfortably.

Good Manners Influence All My companions and I looked at each other with smiles of approbation. "If I were looking for a boy to take into my business I'd give that youth a chance," said the man of the party. "I'd like to know that boy's mother," I said. "If he had his pedigree hung around his neck and a coat of arms branded on his forehead, you wouldn't know any more what sort of family he comes from," said the other woman.

Now very likely that boy didn't make mothers these boys have that they have not been taught the first element of good manners, or that the first principles of the art of being a gentleman.
